

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER WHICH SOCIETY PEOPLE LIKE TO TALK ABOUT.

EVERYBODY wished that he was an Irishman last week. There is no happier being in the world than an Irishman on St. Patrick's day. He beams all over. The trials and tribulations of his native land are forgotten for the moment in heartfelt joy over his recollections of the patron saint of his island home. And then green is such a cheerful color. It brightens the whole landscape and makes the onlooker forget the mud and slush that are proverbial on St. Patrick's day. And so it is that outsiders wish that they were all Irishmen. The sight of their happy faces on Friday was enough to dispel a whole year of blues. Real shamrock, too, was comparatively plentiful this year, some thoughtful friends in Ireland having forwarded it in time to reach here before the day that was celebrated. Anaconda's enthusiasts joined heartily in the Butte celebration, and have been straggling home for the past 24 hours. They had a good time.

MISSOULA'S MINGLINGS.

Goings and Comings of the People of the University City.

MISSOULA, March 18.—Society in the Garden City made a little sport this week and braved the consequences of openly engaging in a dancing party in the middle of Lent, but then there was a good and sufficient excuse for this desperate undertaking, for two of the most charming of the many young ladies who have graced the University City with their presence during the past winter are about to take their departure for their homes in the far East, and Missoula's reputation for hospitality had to be sustained, no matter at what cost. It was shocking and, undoubtedly, very, very wicked, but the application of another handful of ashes and a more faithful devotion to the proverbial sackcloth during the remainder of the 40 days will probably square matters for these enthusiastic young people. The diversion referred to was a cotillion given by the Vivant club, Missoula's swiftest social organization, on Tuesday evening, and which, by the way, was announced as the last function of the kind to be given under the auspices of this club. The principal guests of the club on this occasion were the Misses West, and Crutchfield who were leaving for the east on the following day. The dancing room at the Realty block was tastefully and handsomely decorated and all the numerous details had been cared for in a most becoming manner. Handsome favors were distributed during the german and a most enjoyable time was had by all who were fortunate in participating in the affair. In addition to the club's special guests the following ladies and gentlemen were present: Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lister, Mr. and Mrs. B. Haskell, Dr. and Mrs. W. P.
